The US military said Wednesday that a man was shot and killed by a drone strike while trying to plant an explosive device in Afghanistan. The suspect was identified as Zakia Khan of Herat province in western Afghanistan. US officials said the triggerman was an Afghan soldier. They said that the suspicious behavior of the man was picked up by US military satellites and that he was on a watch list of people that pose a threat to US national security. "While the individual was taken into custody by our forces, we conducted a strike," said Capt. Nick Tilley, a spokesman for the US-led international military coalition. Khan, who US officials said had been in contact with al-Qaida and other terrorist groups, was killed when the man detonated his explosive as coalition forces approached him. He was wearing a suicide vest, Colonel Lawrence Vicheza, a spokesman for the International Security Assistance Force, told
